During Crime Victims' Rights Week, Ulster County Probation's Crime Victim's Assistance Program, in collaboration with Ulster County Executive Mike Hein, have planned a number of community-oriented activities in an effort to raise awareness about the rights of victims and the services that are available to them in Ulster County.

During Crime Victim's Rights Week, April 10 – April 16, 2016, Ulster County is raising awareness of the many resources available, so anyone who is victimized by a crime knows that there is help available. "In the aftermath of a crime, no victim should ever have to recover on their own," said County Executive Mike Hein. "We appreciate the dedication of our Crime Victim's Assistance Program as well as the many local organizations who work together tirelessly to help victims of crime and provide hope and recovery."

The Crime Victim's Assistance Program and its collaborative partners have provided assistance and support to thousands of victims and their families for the past thirty years. Yet, there are many residents who are unaware of the services available, including the caring volunteers who are standing by to respond to a hot-line call, or staff members who can advocate for them in court or provide them with support whether or not they decide to press charges.

During Crime Victim's Rights Week, Ulster County together with local agencies want to raise awareness and provide information regarding victim's rights and the many resources available.

The Activities Calendar on page 2 includes the events planned for the week and please stay tuned to your local stations for Public Service Announcements regarding events and updates. You can also view details regarding the activities by visiting the following website and Facebook pages at:
