

Invites you to attend the following Emergency Service Training Program

Managing Volunteer & Combination Emergency Service Organizations

You can't run emergency service organizations (ESO) the way you used to! Today's ESO is simply not an "emergency response agency". Your ESO is a quasi-business requiring a number of management practices needed by all organizations, particularly regarding finance, personnel issues and planning in order to function and survive. Each ESO has a number of leadership positions to divide the work load and provide for more focus in those positions. In essence, ESOs have changed from their original mission of response to an emergency to one of identifying potential problems, planning to deal with risks, educating the public, preparing the community in the event of an emergency, and responding to manage the problem that exists.
